New Tools to Build the Energy Information Pipeline
A new Home Energy Information Accelerator Toolkit from the Building Technologies Office of the U.S Department of Energy includes key resources to improve access to home energy information in the real estate transaction. Read about the replicable and sustainable approaches implemented and access resources to help you do the same. Follow the conversation with #HEIAToolkit.

Moving Forward Together
The Residential Energy Services Network and Pearl Certification are collaborating to ensure that the Home Energy Rating System (HERS) Index and Pearl Certification Reports complement each other in the new and existing markets. The end goal is to increase the quantity and accessibility of information about efficient homes.

MLS and Energy Efficiency Momentum
The Real Estate Standards Organization (RESO) is actively promoting the addition of home energy information into multiple listing services based upon their Data Dictionary standards. Listen to RESO CEO Jeremy Crawford talk about what's happening right now at the intersection of home energy data, standards, and multiple listing services.
